It was amusing last evening to see the earneatness of the pittings from different parts of the State. All entered into the merits of Lecompton and Anti-Lecompton, as though that was the great issue of the day. The Lecomptonites number four to one of the Antis, and give the latter no show at all, but browbeat them upon all occasions. The only chance the Anti-Lecomptonities will have to seitheir foot in the Convention in the Convention of the Antis.

VOLUME XIII.

CHICAGO, SATURDAY, AUGUST 27, 1859.

Mf. R. said that he had some time tarried the delegation to retire and consult, but they had not, and he wenld now renew his invitation.

Another Delegate from Sussex County said there was a number of delegates instructed not to meet in the caucus with the bogus delegation, and did not intend to acept the invitation. He doubted if Mr. R. had voted the Democratic ticket for two years.

It was impossible under the confusion that reigned to report one half of the thousand noises that arose all around; but the cry of "Rule them all out" was uppermost amongst the tunuk. All sorts of questions were raised. A vote was finally taken and the motion to reconsider carried. This opened the whole question, and if seven devils had been let loose they could not have caused a greater uproar.

A motion was then made to give the Sussex County delegation another trial, when one of the members of that delegation saked to let both of the delegations from that county withdraw from the Convention, and to take no farther part in their deliberation, pledging at the asme time The complete State tricks of the La C b indholders is as follows:

"After a stay of fifteen or twenty minutes upon the Canadian shore, he started back with a cook store swung upon his back, the culinary appurtenances thereto, consisting of saucepan, ladie, sundry dishes, and a pair of bellows; securely fastened upon the store. It must not be imagined that the store he bore upon his back was a full sized cast iron. "Victor." meiher must it be fancied a miniature affair—a disguised spirit lamp chafing dish. It was a goodly sked, properly fashioned cooking store, made of Russia sheet iron, boasting of a smoke pipe about two feet in height. Arrived at the centre of the rope Blondiu secured his pole and proceeded with great monchalance to make preparations for Williamos

On the 5th ballot, Wright receiving a majority of the votes, the different delegations changed their votes, and it was announced that Mr. Wright had received 388 votes, and his nomination was announced amidst tremendous cheering, which lasted some ten minutes.

He is said to be the first fian who brought Mr. Bachanan's name before the public of New, Jersey, for which service the President subsequently tendered him a foreign mission, but the General declined to accept. General Wright is the owner of a famous animal that played the part of the Wild Horse of Tartary at the Broudway Thestre two years ago, and if the master of the horse only runs as well as the horse did on that occasion, he will be a hard man to heat. throng:

| Da Lava's Second Performance.—De Lave repeated his light rope performances at Rochester day before yesterday. His feats upon the first crossing consisted of hanging himself-to-the cable by his feet, his head and hands swinging downwards; then by one foot; then by one foot and a hand, and finally letting himself down, holding to the cable by his hands alone. On his return he lay down more than the contract of the cable by his hands alone.

As to the candidates, all throughout the evening the chances of General E. V. E. Mright seem to predominate. Ac is the representative of the Lecompton side, and the account choice of the Lecompton side, and the account choice of the Lecompton in the Amboy. Mr. Herring, the first comptonites, had but a meagre show; his friends were exceedingly nervous, and exhibited symptoms of spassus at any situation to his not being a Simon Pare Democrat. That was the great question of the evening: Is he a good Democrat—Has he bolted cur tucket?—Will he voie for any person nominated?—Areyon willing to submit to the action of the majority? SECCING CASUALIT — ANOTHER WARNING TO BOYS.—About half past one o'clock yesterday, as the Burlington freight train was passing the State street crossing, a young lad who had been riding on one of the cars lenged off, and siriking his feet on a bank at the side of the track fell backwards directly before the wheels which passed over him crushing and mangling him in a most shocking manner. Coroner James held an inquest, when it appeared that the unfortunate had was named Peter Barthen, aged cleven years, son of a worthy employee in a planing mill on Canal near West Madison street. He has been peddling matches, and had been inlulging in the common practice of careless lads in stealing rides upon trains passing at reduced speel through the city limits. He paid a fearful pentity for his thoughtlessness. No blame on itd be attached to the employees of the road.

There is a movement hither from the swell mob of all our cities, from the sinks and purieus of crime in all our communities. We doubt not that infamous men, and women foreooth, in New

Many of them are here already, and the res will arrive betimes. Now we have a thoroughly wide awake set of city detectives; and to City Marshal Rohm was never accorded aught that savors of unworthiness to be at the head of our detective force. We are glad to learn that the detectives of other cities are to be very numerasly present to give them aid and counsel in swell mob. For must we forget the high pro-fessional standing of other well-known Chiesgo detectives, whose fame is national—for who has not heard of Cyrus P. Bradley and Allan Pink-

Now we have a personal remembrance of a scene with which Marshal Tukey most strikingly prefaced the great Railroad Celebration in the good city of Boaton, a few years since. He had worn in several hundred special policemen, a we shall do here. Mr. Tukey knew these m rary office, but they were green in the ways of delty is Mercury. The plan decided upon we well remember, as the writer was one of the immense crowd gathered in Court square and School street, when one by one of the captives were brought forth, and made to stand upon a platform while some keen officer posted in their private and pro-fessional history would detail the same to the Boston regulars and specials, and the specta ors. It would run something like this: "This is Bob. — an old hand at the patent safe game, frequently caged, &c."

"This is Margaret — a tip-top pick-pocket—operates chiefly in omnibusses and cars. She is an old hand." And so ran the entire Summer afternoon

Now we have a Bridewell with a long, close shed, and convenient stone heaps, with plenty of hammers. We have need of Macadamizing material. We have an ordinance which we bemay be made to include quite a large num the first water. Arrists for Fast Driving.—Our public streets were never intended for race tracks and we are glad that this tardy lesson is being taught those who almost daily imperil the lives and property of quiet citizens by their criminal recklessness, in driving at top speed through crowded thorough fares. Michigan avenue has in its improved condition been recently the field of operations for some of these fast drivers, and to such an extent had the evil grown that we to such an extent had the evil grown that we are glad to learn that Capt. The nui-sance becomes the worse and the more serious when two or three feams at once with their half tipsy, yelling, conductors come tearing in sim-ultaneously from some suburban resort, where bad whisky has fired their blood and left them no higher ambition than the issue of a sharp brush back to town "for the drinks." Let these fellows be attended to, good Capt. Kennedy.

Military.—In your paper of the 26th it is announced that the Quincy Blues will be here during Fair week, to contest for the stand of colors offered the best drilled corps. Is it generally understood by the military companies abroad that a prise of this character is to be awarded? I really hope it is, and that we may expect to see here such admirably drilled soldiers as the Seventh Regiment of New York, and the "Grays" of Rochester, to contend in boble emulation, with our own well appointed Light Guard and corps of young Cadets.

No greater attraction can be presented to the people during the Fair than the evolutions of fine military bodies.

the calm assurance of a philosoper and with aims professedly as unselfish as those of the true patriot. This, considering the ranted in saying, is the impression which the author intended his easay abould make upon the public mind. Evidently, the large dreals tion of the Magazine selected, its non-political character, and therefore the certainty that its contents would fall under the observation of housands who would never have read a do exlumns of any one of Mr. Doughas' organs well as the direction of the production.

The motive which prompted the production will be apparent to every one who considers the position and the aspirations of Mr. Douglas. He is a candidate for the Presidency. From the day on which he entered the United States Senate to the present hour, every public act in which he has engaged, every speech has given or dedged, has been with direct ref purpose. After the close of the contest in this State last fall, Mr. Douglas made a pilgrimage last session of Congress, he bent his susp thitherward. It needed far less sagacity that was settling in upon him from the leaders of the anti-Lecompton Democrats in the Pres States, demanding as a condition of further the North than he had assumed in his possible of last winter. Standing in tion any way, and with the prospect of North, unless he assumed a decided stand in opposition to his previously expressed opinions, as a last, if not a despairing effort, to the object of his ambition, we have this ensay—this bid for Northern support.

In the brief comments which we shall make upon the article itself and or was a last. ing attention to a single significant fact—a fact which has been signally illustrated in various other productions of Mr. Douglas. The subect of the essay is "The Dividing Line be tween Federal and Local Authority." To en sition to Stavery agitation as Mr. Douglas; no more to uts subject, it should be style amazed at its display even by Mr. Douglas, ifications we shall point out bereaf-resentation, that Mr. Douglas has sought to fortify and give strength to his position. We might say that considered as a lawyer's argu-

for which the whole was specially written—is the promulgation by Mr. Doughas of another change in his semimonts on the general sub-ject of Slavery in the Territories. The Repub-sican doctrine is and always has been, that Slav-ery is the creature of municipal law—that it is an institution unknown to the federal constitution and that it can have as lawed extraction.

I do not put alarray on a different feeting from other property. I recognize it as property under what is understood to be the decision of the Supreme Court. I agree that the owner of shares than the owner of shares than the owner of shares than the owner of any other peers of property with him as the owner of any other peers of property with him as the owner of any other peers of property and to held the owner, subject to such local laws as the Territorial Legislature may constitutionally pass; and if any person shall feel agree of the territorial Legislature may constitutionally pass; and if any person shall feel agree of the Supreme Court to test the califoldy of mock laws. I recognize always to the subject to such that I would be a shall be always to the Supreme Court to test the califoldy of mock laws. I recognize always people as any apply one rule to share property and another to all other kinds of property.—[Cong. Globe, 155e, p. 125e.

This much bir. Douglas said with an ope to the Seath. As a counterpoise for Newthern fever, he inverted his dogma of local police regulations and "unfriendly legislation." That is to any, although the Constitution carried Slavery into the Territories, the people of these Territories might practically annul the Constitution by neglecting to pass local police regulations for the projection and security of slave property, or by saring that description of prop-ica, Congress was bound to furnish action to it there. Although Mr. Douglas ed it then, it would seem that Mr. Lincoln lly convinced him, for we find him in this ay, making precisely the same argument it is held in contradiction of Mr. Douglas' former opinions, and contrary to the dicta in the Dred Scott decision, and in harmony with Republican principles, that the Constitution does not carry slavery into the Territories—that a savery a the creature of local law—that the savery and the property—that it may be excluded by Terrtorial Legislatures, by positive enactment (not in the roundabout method of neglecking to pass local police regulations as asserted in the Freeport speech.)

To dismiss the subject for the present with a brief summary of the whole matter, we may say that this cassay is another stage in Mr. Doughas' journey towards the principles of the Republican party. All that there is it to excite the enthusiasm of his political friends and admirers, is a tribute to the correctness of Republican principles by approximating as closely, as possible to them. But one step more—the right and duty of Congress to preserve the Territories sacred to freedom—and he would stand squarely more than the correctness of the Political contents the constitution of the entire power and influence of the fedral government under the constitutions of the people of the territories and stage government under the constitution, but also the people of the territories and stage government under the constitution, but also the people of the territories and stage government under the constitution, but also the people of the territories and the relative powers and functions of the federal operation and interest have government under the constitution in minumities of the people of the territories and the relative powers and functions of the federal operation and interest have government under the constitution in the remainder of the people of the territories of years; while the disputed question—involving the right political organization which was formed in 1856, and has assumed the name of the Republican party, is based on the theory that African slavery, as it exists in this country, is an evil of such magnitude—social, moral and political—as to justify and require the execution of the entire power and influence of the fedral operation of the entire power and influence of the fedral operation of the entire power and influence of the fedral operation of our platform. We wish we could say that we regard his change of views so far as they have progressed in the right direction, the result of an honcet regard for territories.

re cannot do this violence to our ecovictions Mr. Douglas is playing the game for the Pres show of Northern strength as to compel that that his next purpose evidently is to place times! at the head of the free soil movement of the free and the border slave States. To accomplish the last he has but a single step to take, though it remains to be seen whether his roffered leadership would be accepted.

Rustern Importations and Western Crops.

The East is never satisfied. When its reckboomes the imperative duty of Congress to interpose its authority and furnish such protection.

Third—Those who, while professing to believe that she with the constitution establishes slavery in the territories beyond the power of Congress or the Eastern fever has broken out again.

In 1857 and 1858, the cry was—"The West don't per its debta." But now the general murmur its—"The West wont sell its crops."—it is "hoarding—"have Eastern capital has built us railroads; but we won't use them—we keep our crops in our barms and stow-houses. The state of the control of the cont at kind of thing. Some of those fal-tions we shall point out hereaf.

But it is by the suppression of orts of history more than in their in their state.

Rouguas own language. The writer opens his argument as follows:

Under our complex system of government it is the first duty of Amrican statesmen to mark distinctly the dividing is a between federal and local authority. To do this with accuracy involves an inquiry, not only into the powers and duties of the federal government under the constitution, but also into the rights, privileges, and immunities of the neonle of the territories.

According to the theory of the Republican party there is an irrepressible conflict between freedom and slavery, free labor and slave labor, the free States and slave States, which is irreposed in the states and slave States, which is irreposed in the states and slave States, which is irreposed in the states and states and the states are states and the states are states as the states are states and the states are states as the states are states are states as the states are states are states as the states are states as the states are states are states as the states are states are states as the states are states as t

"If the proposition be true, that the constitution establishes slavery in the territories beyond the power of the people legally to control it, another result, no less startling, and from which there is no escape, must invariably follow. The constitution is uniform 'everywhere within the dominions of the United States, and that 'Kansan is therefore at this moment as much a slave State as Georgia or South Carolina,' why does it not exist in Pennsylvania by virtue of the same constitution of the United States, and that 'Kansan is therefore at this moment as nouch a slave State as Georgia or South Carolina,' why does it not exist in Pennsylvania by virtue of the States of the United States, and that 'Kansan is therefore at this moment as to provide with the trivity of the ground that 'slavery exists in Kansas of an concentration or the protection of slave property in the territories upon the ground that 'slavery exists in Kansas' and concentrative on provide similar protection of slave property in all the States of the Union, when the legislatures fail to furnish such protection."

Its present constitution was adopted at Abany in 1856, after considerable lively discussion, and seems to be working well. Indeed, it is wisely and cantiously drawn; and in soch a way that it corresponds for the most part to the political constitutions of the general government and of the States. Its draft is such, at least, as to provide for the admission of members without unreasonable readmission of members without unreasonable re-

"The Court refers to that clause of the Constitution which provides for the rendition of fugitire slaves as their authority for saving that "the right of property in slaves is distinctly and expressly affirmed in the Constitution." By reference to that prevision it will be seen that, while the word "slaves" is not used, still the Constitution not only recognizes the right of property in slaves, as stated by the Court, but explicitly states what class of persons shall be deemed slaves, and under what laws or authorisecure its control in their hands, or again its member's shall become restive under the unwarranted exercise by the rulers of the privileges which they enjoy. Those who are Curious to either side, customing spasmomenty as me grass, shuddering with terror, and shrinking from some fanciful inward visions." The following is another. It is narrated by Dr. Carson, a man of some eminence, a calm, Christian, philosophical man—the son of our own Dr. C.

A poor child about seven or eight years of age came to my house one night at a late hour, and asked to see Mrs. C., who had gone to her bed-town. The interview was readily granted. The child became affected. Her imploring and heart-renting cries for mercy—for sho said she was a sinier on the brink of hell—were so absolutely distressing that I had to leave the house for a time, as I could not bear to listen to the melancholy tones of her infant voice. The expression of deep despair and sincerity on her countenance could not be imitated by the best actor I ever saw on the stage. It was a dreadful scene. In a few hours the poor child got most perfect relief, and her countenance appeared almost superhuman with delight. She began to pray, and her prayer would have melted the heart of a rock. It was so powerful, so fluent, so accurate, so intense, and so full of thought, that it almost looked like an inspiration in a child so young. I am sure the access will never leave the eyes of those who witnessed it.

As I see some statements in relation to the great religious excitement in Ireland which are not very accurate, I will devote the whole of this letter to that subject, and will lay before agreement of the second of the second pather from the published documents within my reach. I do this the more readly, as it is, by the confession of all, the most wondeful religious movement in the Church's history in modern times. There has been nothing like it in the past. It is changing the social, the mental and moral sapects of society where it prevails; and onward the tide of holy influence is rolling with increasing power. LAW SCHOOL LAGHER.

Of Chicago. At the great union prayer-meeting held in the Royal Botanic Garden in Belfast at which 40,000 persons were present, it was of course impossible for the speakers at the central platform to make themselves heard by by the great multitude.

Clergymen and others scattered themselves among them, each forming she center of a large congregation which immediately gathered around, joining in devotional exercises. At one time there were no less than twenty of these subordinate meetings, numbering from 500 to 1,000 each. Every here and there throughout the immense multitude, while the hymn or the prayer was rising on high, persons were being D. PARK'S, 134 &c., &c., &c. tal and moral aspects of society where it prevails; and onward the tide of holy influence is rolling with increasing power.

This work, at present, then, is confined to the North of Ireland. It extends over five counties in that part of the island. Belfast, Coleraise and Londonderry are the centre of its influence, though not of its origin; but the small towns and villages for miles around are under its power. There is nothing impassioned, excitable or superstitious in the character of the people. Unlike the Celts of the South and West, who are full of these elements, they are the descendants of the men of the "English pale," and exhibit many of the features of the Saxon character. It is the stronghold of the Protestant influence, and Presbyterianism is the prevalent ecclesiastical element among the dissidents from the Church. The latter has great weight; the churches of the body are numerous; the uninsters men of mental power and rich and varied culture. Nothing can be further from enthusiasm than the ministry of these men. I only need mention the names of Dr. Cook, Professors Edgar, Gibson, McCosh and others, who have uttered their solemn convictions that the work is of God, and are giving now their whole soul to its guidance and devancement. In many parts of the garden, groups of land girls, who had retired from the body of congregation, formed in the shrubbery I meetings for prayer and exhortation and themselves. Some of these were ragged I boys who had evidently belonged to the out classes. One of these cases was that of a hoy, about cleven years old, who, in a very tired part of the garden engaged in prayer, roanded by about twenty lads of the same and class. This lad was, it appears, negles by his parents, and formerly obtained a scircelihood by hawking ballads through streets; and the tattered garments in which as well as his companions were arrayed Wednesday, show that, in that respect, the prospects in life have not much improved.

The origin of this movement is of singular interest. The same agency in the main as marked more or less the commencement of your great work has been employed here. Prayer in both cases was the spring from which these streams of blessedness flow. The action of the laity in this movement is of singular interest. Elders, deacons, leaders and members, are very prominent. In prayer meetings, and visiting the awakened, they are very active. They originate and lead meetings, they address the assembled crowds on the great and absorbing varieties of faith, they deal with the awakened, and in other ways are filling up various departments of Christian labor, from which many of them had been shut out.

The spire of prayer evidently marks it. It is the most prominent. Never was there anything like it. In many places, every second house in the streets is a bethel, In houses, shops, warerooms, squares, school rooms, churches and chapels, they meet for prayer. They gather to thousands. Every place of worship is opened aimost from morning till night. Only the other day the beautiful Botanie Gardens at Belfast were visited by about forty thousand people, who in different groups spent the day in various acts of religious services. A week or two ago the new court house at Coleraine was to be opened to the people. Arrangements were made for peoplemant the word of the convenience of parties attended from morning till night by thousands of devout and interested persons. Over the whole population a deep and absorbing religious feeling is spread. Treaders that their paper is delayed on this account, and markets are scarcely attended—while railway directors are putting on special trains, and allowing to run till a late hour, for the convenience of parties attending religious services from a distance. All churches are sharing in the tide of blessing. None are exempt.

There never was a material fact of larger consequence to the country, than this which is now visible to every eye and palpable to every understanding. It demorstrates conclusively that a harmony of interests can alone prosper and elevate labor, and that the farmer, manufacturer, miner and mechanic are alike interested in a tariff which will encourage our own industry and protect us against foreign competition. If the tariff of 1842, or any other recognizing the great principles upon which it was founded, were now in existence, every bushel of wheat and corn which the West could furnish would find a remunerative and reliable market at home, instead of being dependent upon a capricious and uncertain demand abroad. Every new hand put to work in a mine, or factory, or workshop, is a gain to agriculture and an accession to the home market, which the farmer, first of all others, is to profit by. The day is at hand when experience will teach him this lesson, and, though at some cost, it will be for his permanent benefit and that of the country.

[From the N. Y. Courier and Equirer.]

Yet there is a mode of putting a limit to this downward tendency of grain, and but one; and that is by enlarging and strengthening the home market. The loom and the asvir must be recognized as the natural allies of the plough and the harrow. The mechanic arts and manufactures open new spheres of employment, and gather masses of population who have need of the products of the farmer, and, through their own productive industry are able to pay good prices for the same. A foreign market not only involves the loas consequence—though their own productive industry are able to pay good prices for the same. A foreign market ont only involves the loas consequence—though we think of far more consequence than she imagines whether she has a home market or not, for she is sure of a foreign market and on the country variable, for there is not a nation in Europe which does not make it a point to raise its own horeastudits from its own soil.
